

Combiner box price for 1MW photovoltaic

Article Overview

The cost of a 1MW PV combiner box typically ranges from $3,000 to $10,000 per unit, depending on features, monitoring, and manufacturer quality.

Overview

A PV combiner box serves as the central hub for multiple solar panel strings, consolidating DC outputs before sending power to the inverter. For a 1MW system, multiple strings are combined, often requiring high-capacity combiner boxes with advanced protection and monitoring features. These boxes include overcurrent protection, surge protection devices (SPD), and sometimes string-level monitoring for voltage, current, and temperature.

Factors Affecting Price

- Capacity and Number of Inputs: Larger systems with more PV strings require combiner boxes with multiple input circuits, which increases cost.
- Protection Features: Advanced units include DC fuses, circuit breakers, surge arresters, and ground fault detection, which add to the price.
- Monitoring and Smart Features: Boxes with string monitoring, remote data access, and performance tracking are more expensive but improve ROI and plant performance.
- Quality and Certification: Units from reputable manufacturers with IEC-61439-2 compliance, weatherproof enclosures, and UL testing are priced higher but ensure long-term reliability.
