

Fiber Optic Cable Cap-Type Junction Box

Article Overview

Fiber optic junction boxes typically use either dome (vertical) or horizontal cap types, designed to protect splices and manage fiber routing for indoor and outdoor applications.

Cap Types

1. Dome (Vertical) Cap

- The dome or vertical type features a rounded top that seals the enclosure, providing robust protection against environmental factors such as moisture, dust, and UV exposure.
 - Commonly used in outdoor aerial or underground installations, especially for FTTH "tap" points where drop cables are spliced to distribution cables.
 - Offers high fiber capacity, ranging from 24 to 192 fibers, and allows for organized storage of spliced fibers with bend radius protection.
- #### 2. Horizontal Cap
- The horizontal type has a flat or slightly curved top, making it easier to mount on walls or poles in limited-space environments.
 - Often preferred for indoor or compact outdoor installations due to its smaller footprint and easier access for maintenance.
 - Supports fiber splicing and distribution with removable trays or cassettes for adapters like SC or LC.
