

Outdoor power distribution box material cutting and welding

Article Overview

Outdoor power distribution boxes are typically fabricated from stainless steel, carbon steel, aluminum, or fiberglass, with cutting and welding processes carefully selected to maintain durability, corrosion resistance, and safety.

Material Selection

Stainless Steel (SS316): Highly corrosion-resistant, ideal for harsh outdoor environments, including coastal or industrial areas. It offers excellent longevity and structural strength, making it suitable for low-voltage and high-voltage enclosures .

Carbon Steel: Often used with powder-coated finishes (e.g., RAL2004 orange) to enhance corrosion resistance and visibility. Carbon steel is strong and cost-effective but requires proper surface treatment to prevent rust .

Aluminum: Lightweight and naturally corrosion-resistant, aluminum is easier to handle and reduces overall enclosure weight. It is suitable for portable or temporary outdoor installations .

Fiberglass/Composite: Non-conductive and corrosion-resistant, ideal for environments with high moisture or chemical exposure. Fiberglass enclosures are lightweight and can be molded into complex shapes .

Cutting Techniques

- Laser Cutting: Provides precise, clean cuts with minimal deformation, suitable for stainless steel, carbon steel, and aluminum .
- Shearing and CNC Punching: Efficient for straight cuts and repetitive patterns, co...
