

Price of Home Distribution Box Shell

Article Overview

The price of a household distribution box shell typically ranges from $20 to $200, depending on size, material, and features.

Typical Price Range

For a basic plastic distribution box shell, prices start around $20-$50 for small units suitable for home use, such as 4-8 way boxes with ABS or polycarbonate shells . Larger or more robust units, including those with IP65 waterproof ratings, flame-retardant plastic, or UV resistance, can cost $100-$200 or more . Industrial-grade or stainless steel enclosures with advanced protection features may exceed this range.

Factors Affecting Price

- Material: ABS or polycarbonate plastic is cheaper, while stainless steel or powder-coated metal increases cost .
- Size and Capacity: More ways (e.g., 12-24 circuits) or larger enclosures raise the price .
- Protection Rating: IP-rated boxes (e.g., IP65) for dust and water resistance are more expensive .
- Internal Components: Empty shells are cheaper; adding MCBs, RCDs, busbars, or surge protectors significantly increases the total cost .
- Customization: OEM branding, custom busbar layouts, or special cable entry options can affect pricing, especially for bulk orders .
